Fine Bone China
Made in England

www.johnfmueller.com

Marked with a 'Mueller' backstamp, my china is of the 'fine bone' and 'English' variety. That means it is manufactured and decorated in England by hand. I have 'curated' a selection of so-called whiteware that is made in England, so plain white china in a variety of shapes and sizes which can be decorated. I can supply other shapes, but these may have to be imported from outside the United Kingdom. Usually the decoration is a simple line around the rim to complement a transfer-printed crest or coat of arms. This is always done in England even if the raw product is 'foreign' (as it used to say on the backstamp of porcelain from abroad). This process means relatively small batches can be made at affordable prices. The image I always prepare beforehand so it looks best when transferred and fired. I keep my blues light and muted usually as it looks best on china.

The resulting product is largely dishwasher safe, but I highly recommend that it be washed by hand for longevity of the quality of the design. Things with a golden rim naturally cannot be put in a microwave.

Example costing would be, with arms, crest or monogram on one side of each and a gold rim:

1x Teapot
1x Cream Jug
1x Lidded Sugar Pot
6x Cups and Saucers
